Many believe that General Gomez, disappointed at the attitude taken toward him by the people of San Domingo, has come back to Cuba to engage in an active campaign for the future presidency of the Cuban Republic. It is asserted that his first step will be to bring all his influence to bear in favor of the election to the mayoralty of Havana of Gen. Alejandro Rodriguez, partly for personal and partly for political considerations. If he can make the necessary impression on the members of the National party, and if the result of his intervention is the defeat of Senor Estrada Mora, then the power of General Gomez will be much more generally recognized than it is now. Already his friends have issued a statement saying that early in the week he will attempt to consolidate the Democratic Republican and Nationalist parties, with a view to bring about a harmonious constitutional convention in this city in August. The authors of this statement contend that such a convention is the only path to independence. It is reported that Gomez, who has been at Santo Domingo, said he was returning to Havana to bring about the complete and absolute independence of Cuba, and that he had such a convention in view. It is also asserted the Presbyterian creed. CHANCELLOR M'CRACKEN CHANGES IN CHURCH POLITY.

New Catholic Bishop of Savannah-Presbyterian Preachers Fill Local Pulpits at Cedarville, Ohio.

NEW YORK, June 3 .- In his baccalaureate sermon before the members of the graduating class of the New York University to-day Chancellor McCracken commented on the movements for revision of the Thinker Toward Religious Truth" the subject of his sermon. In commenting on the church problem he said: "In this closing year of the century Methodism has shown a new vitality in methods by which she obtained the name of Methodism. Compulsory itinerancy has been judged by her no longer the strong or desirable pillar of the truth. She has quietly put it aside. Presbyterianism, in like manner, has this same year shown new vitality in refusing to consider her ancient creed, that attempts to establish definite chronology of the workings of the divine intellect while it forgets almost entirely to mention the divine heart. Such a creed is not the best possible pillar or upport of religious truth.

'The church to-day is resolved to build a new pillar and support that shall stand side by side with the old. The old may remain also as an antique, honored and cherished, but yet an antique. To build a new pillar is both easier and better than to try to piece out the old. That were to put new cloth into an old garment.'

It was the morning after he returned that the delegation of gold Democrats from the East called at his house to question him as to the possibility of securing a modification of the financial plank of the national platform. They found Mr. Bryan in his shirt sleeves setting things to rights, but he plain English that he would not consent to an evasion of the silver issue, even by a general indorsement of the Chicago vince any member of this gold delegation that Mr. Bryan is evading the silver question in any possible way during this present campaign. His neighbors do not credit the stories of Mr. Bryan's reporte wealth. They say he gives freely and lives well, and if it were not for the proceeds of his book sales and the writing ne does he would need other resources. In Lincoln Bryan is looked upon as good neighbor, but not as a great man. In 1896, in the face of all the depression then existing, the people of Lincoln gave McKinley 1,000 majority against their townsman. In 1900 they may not hit him quite so hard, not because they believe in before, and they have in view the possioility of his election on the principle that lightning may strike anywhere, an event which would appeal to local pride, regard-less of political beliefs. Bryan has never been looked upon in Lincoln as a man to whom the people would turn when seeking for some one to bear grave responsibility, exercise calm, deliberate judgment or fulfill great trusts. They have always called upon him to make their speeches or plead their causes. His ready tongue, persuasive manner and personal influence have been utilized more than once, and he is regarded even by his

Even his most ardent followers do not seem to believe he will be elected President, but they are holding themselves in readiness to take advantage of the opportunities which will offer in case this event comes to pass. This is the strongest fusion influence in the Nebraska situation to-day. During the campaign of 1896 the principal streets of Lincoln were obstructed by groups of men discussing the financial estion. Business had been paralyzed by bad crops, there were many to join the idle throng, conditions seemed wrong everywhere, and Bryan offered a change In this campaign of 1900 the streets of Lincoln present a different scene. There are no crowds discussing the silver question, for everybody is busy attending to his own affairs. To-day in Nebraska a man is ashamed to be seen idle. Mr. Bryan tells them they are mistaken, that they are not so prosperous as they think they are. He maintains that prices are so high, owing to the trusts, that any apparent increase in incomes is nullified.
